The use of Geological Knowledge. Dr. Owen, in his Geological report for the State of Kentucky-to illustrate the importance of geological surveys-relates the following history of the Baird family, near Glasgow, now enjoying the largest annual revenues, perhaps of any private family in the world. The blackwere made, is found in all the coal strata on Green River; from which iron will mines, as worthless-in the opinion of its owners-as was the iron stone considered by the Bairds', before they had tried it. It is not unlikely that the same black-band pervades the coal deposits in thus it is that the United States, at this the counties to the north of us; and we shall never know the fact till we have a geological survey of the State. One deposit of this rock, so valueless in appear- as much ease as we our thousands. ance to the common eye, would enhance and create property enough to bring a revenue into the State Treasury, that would pay, every year, the cost of a perfect geological examination of the whole

Dr. Owen's Reports-copies of which, he has presented to our Mercantile Library and are there accessable to every citizen-are durable monuments of his industry and eminent ability. It is a reproach to our State, that while our neighbors are availing themselves of his knowledge and labors, and are revealing their own treasures and attracting capital and enterprise to their soil,-his own State has not sufficient appreciation of his worth, and the importance of his labors, to employ him in her own interests .--With what amazement and shame will future citizens of this State look back upon the doings of the Legislature of Indiana, at its last session, degrading them selves, and bringing anarchy into the State to subserve the unprincipled ambition of an ignorant demagogue, like Jesse D. Bright, while the lators in the · field of science of such a man as Dr. David Dale Owen-which would have conferred honor and wealth upon the State-were rejected because they would cost the people a little more than their unworthly Representatives daily squandered in futile, factious proceedings, doing the blood is purified, the whole system renovated, and nothing but loading the name of the State | the functions and duties of life become a pleasure with infamy.

Between thirty and forty years ago, when the iron trade in Scotland received a fresh impetus by the introduction into the business of various improvements, and a new raw material, hitherto over- For twenty years I have used your Pills as my family looked or considered impracticable, a family of the name of Baird, owned a small fram of some thirty or forty acres, between seven and eight miles from Glas-

This property was underlaid by a bed of coal-the Monkland coal seam-which cartloads to the Glasgow mrrket.

Partly from this small coal business and partly from the products of the farm . the family barely made a living; finding PURGING BY MEANS OF BRANDRETH'S it often difficult to make the two ends So limited, indeed, was their means, that the father considered the business inadequate to the support of the family, so that as the two eldest sons grew to manhood, he urged upon them the necessity of seeking a livelihood elsewhere, in some other business. During the excavations for the coal on the farm, a kind of iron stone was encountered, and a considerable quantity taken out which lay scattered in piles at the mouth of the pit, as worthless rubbish encumbering the ground. At one of these family meetings, while counciling in regard to future prospects, it was suggested by the eldest son that

The father, supposing the amount of capital required to commence such a business entirely beyond their limited means, thought, at first, such an enterprise out of the question. Finally, however, by uniting the whole savings of the family, and effecting certain small loans, the father and sons managed to erect, with the the sum of £1,300, an iron furnace for production of pig iron from their black-band ironstone and coal. The business succeeded beyond their expectation; in a few years, they were . not only able to pay off the borrowed capital, but had laid up surplus sufficient to erect another furnace. Soon they were able to purchase adjoining coal and iron property, and lease the right for mining black-band ore on other estates. This being about the time the first successful introddction of that species of ore for making iron, its real intrinsic value was, as yet, but little known; so that they were enabled to obtain mining rights for this ore at a shiling a ton, while some of their neighbors in the same business, starting later in this branch of trade, paid 15, 16, and even as high, in some instances, as 18 shilling per ton for their mining rights or fordships. Progressing in the business under such favorable auspicies, wealth flowed in fast, as they were enabled to extend their business rapidly, and put into operation furnace after fuanace in rapid succession, and add, from time to time, considerable to their mineral lands. Ultimately, on their well known estate of Gartsherry, celebrated throughout Scotland, there were sixteen furnaces in blast, as well as three or four more in CASES Assorted Pie Fruits, 6 doz. Cans Fresh Peaches, 1 Can Fresh Prunes, For Sale by HORNBROOK & Co.

The Baird family are now in the annual receipt, from their coal and iron works, of a clear priiot of half a million pounds, or two and a half million dollars; wielding a monied influence beyond even the princes of the land. Let it be forcibly impressed on the minds of my readers, that this immense wealth was not amassed by speculation, but from legitimate earnings from a business producing an article of the most inband, out of which their princely fortunes trinsic value -a metal to which Great Britin owes, perhaps, more than to any other of her numerous manufactured products, her national greatness-and some day be made as abundantly and giving, at the same time, constant emland. We have heaps of the same black inhabitants; the material, from which rocks, perhaps, laying around our coal all this wealth was extracted, a mineral taken from the bowels of the earth, regarded for centuries as worthless rub-

Thus it is that Great Britain has risen to the appex of commeocial prosperity; very moment, is paying her "a golden tribute" of $30,000,000 annually for imported iron alone; thus it is that her iron manufactories can raise her millions with
